

An Opposing Opinion

by Rose of the West

Godric's hat wouldn't have the only say. Written for a prompt from Hermione Weasley, inspired by Owlbait's "Godric's Legacy."

1

Chapter 1 of 1

Godric's hat wouldn't have the only say. Written for a prompt from Hermione Weasley, inspired by Owlbait's "Godric's Legacy."

Disclaimer: The characters here and the world they inhabit are the creation and property of JK Rowling and her assigns.

He stood in a sub-basement known only to himself. His breath left his body in a sibilant caress and his darling answered in kind. He made his way through the paths he would describe to his children. Over the years, they would have to care for her and make sure she continued to be hidden within an ever-changing castle.

Godric's damned hat wouldn't have the only say. Salazar had created an answer. There would be peril within the castle... as in life. He turned at the doorway and looked down upon the chamber he had created, known only to himself.

A/N: Written in response to a prompt from HermioneWeasley: Describe the building of the Chamber of Secrets.

Thanks to Owlbait for the beta read!

This was written on Saturday during chat but was held 20 or so hours until the reveal of this week's LDWS authors. This was inspired by Owlbait's "Godric's Legacy, which won the week and which you should read and review.